

Polders can be found along the delta area of the Euphrates and the Tigris. Where the floods of the two rivers are of the flash type with sharp rises over a few days, river dikes have been built in the early Mesopotamian period. In recent years, a combination of flood detention reservoirs upstreams and embankments in downstream areas is used.

